ROYALTY IN COMMAND—The Duke of Edinburgh, right, sits at the controls of a Vickers Viscount turbo-prop aircraft, while flying 20,000 feet over Mountbatten, England. At left is Stuart Sloan, Vickers test pilot. The Duke was at the controls for more than 20 minutes and brought the plane back to London airport. On April 18 the British European Airways Corporation launched the world's first regular commercial air service using a propeller-turbine plane on the London to Cyprus flight, via Rome and Athens.

QUEEN, PRINCE POSE FOR LATEST COMMAND PORTRAIT—In latest pre-coronation command portrait by Baron Queen Elizabeth poses with Prince Philip in the green drawing-room of Buckingham Palace in London, wearing a pale pink evening gown of lace over tulle. The sash is the blue ribbon of the garter. With it she wears the star of the garter. Her jewelry consists of a Russian fringe diamond necklace in wedding present from the city of London, diamond drop earrings, two diamond bracelets and her diamond wedding ring. The diamond drop brooch at the top of the blue ribbon is a family heirloom that was previously worn by the late Queen Mary. On the Queen's head is a diamond diadem, the brachial of which is composed of a row of diamonds between two rows of pearls. The diadem, which is of great age, was rent for Queen Victoria. The Duke of Edinburgh is wearing the uniform of an admiral of the fleet.—Central Press Canadian.

TAKES DEFENSE ROLE "TOO SERIOUSLY"—When Windsor, they held a mock air raid session recently, officials concluded that some residents, among which was Karl, seen above, took their civil defense training too seriously. Like 56 other "victims," Karl, April 15, lay on the street awaiting a "blow-up" splintered shell and large water and bricks pelted on his face. While waiting for civil defense training to arrive on the scene to treat his "wounds," he was spotted by a passerby, who called for an ambulance. The ambulance driver and attendant took one look at Karl and a slightly damaged car which happened to be parked nearby and presumed he was the victim of a traffic accident. He was rushed to a hospital, and only when he was placed on the operating table did Karl decide his act had gone far enough. He suddenly sat up and explained to the amazed doctors and nurses that he had simply been the victim of an "atomic bomb explosion."—Central Press Canadian.

RACK IN BRITAIN FROM BEL-LIN PRISON—George Robinson, 25-year-old British spy, is seen stepping from the plane that flew him to London from Berlin, where he had been imprisoned by Reds. While aboard from a Swedish ship at Orkney, Robinson, whose home is in Hull, was sentenced to a year in Russian-controlled prison in Berlin for alleged espionage in city. He was released by Reds after serving only six months of his sentence.

GEN. H. D. G. CREER, former Commander of the 1st Canadian Army, was on hand to greet Field Marshal Montgomery, his wartime chief, as the Field Marshal arrived at Rockcliffe Airport, near Ottawa. Field Marshal Montgomery, who is now serving as Deputy Supreme Commander of Allied Powers in Europe, starts a nine-day tour of Canadian military establishments which will take him to Kingston, Montreal and Quebec City. Standing beside the aircraft are, left to right: Field Marshal Montgomery, Vice Admiral R. R. Macgregor, Chief of the Naval Staff; and Gen. Creer.

SCOTS WELCOME THE QUEEN—Queen Elizabeth is escorted by Sir Alexander Bruce on arrival at Dunbarton Castle, Scotland, where Her Majesty was presented with the keys to the castle by Maj. Gen. A. P. D. Telfer-Sinclair, keeper of the keys. Behind them walks the Duke of Edinburgh, wearing the uniform of Admiral of the Fleet. The Queen visited Scotland to launch the new Royal Yacht, Britannia, being built on the Clyde.

EGYPT'S CABINET MINISTERS TAKE MILITARY TRAINING—For the first time in Egypt's history, a military training program was launched exclusively for members of the Egyptian cabinet. Ministers donned khaki uniforms and marched to the training ground near the University of Cairo for their first instruction in the use of the rifle. The cabinet ministers train for one hour every morning for the 15 days. Top above minister of state Fathi Radwan leading the single line of ministers in the march toward the training ground. OVERTURNED CAR PINN GIRD INSIDE FOR EIGHT HOURS—Trapped inside this upturned automobile after it had crashed over a bridge railing on outskirts of Ottawa, 15-year-old Christine Carol Denary remained a prisoner for more than eight hours before she was rescued. Her companion, 17-year-old John Ditty, lay dead a short distance from the car, killed when it went out of control and plunged into shallow creek. The youngsters were on their first date together at a drive-in theatre, from which they were returning when accident occurred. With her hip fractured, Christine fought against unconsciousness through the long nightmare of hours which ended only when a motorist saw a blue car lying on the road and stopped to investigate.—Central Press Canadian.

PRESIDENT JUAN D. PERON, of Argentina, (centre), smiles from Government House balcony in Buenos Aires at a short time before bombs were hurled during his speech to a mass meeting, killing five listeners in the Plaza de Mayo. At left of Peron is Interior Minister Angel Borlenghi, at right, is Maj. Carlos Alonzo, governor of Buenos Aires province. Others are not identified. Peron was subdued and after a shocked pause went on with his speech, adding on the blast and blaming outside and underground forces for Argentina's troubles.

HE COULDN'T WALK BACK—Charles (Fantele) Smith, who set out from Cambria Beach, Calif., to "water-walk" his way to Catalina Island, is shown striding his nautical treadmill a few moments before the four gas tanks came apart at the seams. He was rescued three miles out at sea by Vanguard ship. Another attempt also ended in failure.

ARGENTINIAN ARE JAILED FOR BREAKING PRICE LAWS—Some of 700 merchants arrested of violating the new price laws established by Argentine government are seen above on their way to jail in Buenos Aires, where they will serve a 30-day sentence. President Peron is currently waging a strong campaign to halt skyrocketing prices and end a meat shortage in the capital.—Central Press Canadian.

OUR COMPLETE SHORT STORY—

Murder Will Out

By G. PATRICIA WARBURTON

THOUGHT Cora would be killed. Every detail was carefully planned. Now the stage was set. There would be no mishaps. Cera would pay with her life for her years of misdeeds.

All that Cera had, all that Cera meant was rightfully his. The unfair war had stopped everything but had left him little better than a pauper. Why should Cera have had anything? Stupid Cera who did not know how to study, who had founded a Cat and Dog Home.

Even with all her money she had not managed to get a husband. No wonder, with her cry mania, her giggling voice.

He had been clever. Never once he would do what he revealed his feelings. It was always "Good morning, Cera, how are you today?" He would see her. And after church he would greet her. "A lovely day, isn't it, Cera?"

Oh, he had been clever. He took care to disguise his feelings. Every year, and she always invited him for Christmas dinner at the big house on the hill.

No one would ever suspect him. He smiled at himself in the mirror and looked seductively at his image. He looked magnificently like a villain. Another few minutes and she would be here. He glanced round the room, lying in every detail. Everything was in place, everything fine. Cera would be surprised.

The lights were on, the piano played softly, and a large arm chair was in front of the glowing fireplace.

He felt a surge of excitement. He lit a cigarette and waited absently that she would come.

Then he heard her heels tapping lightly on the hall. She always pressed in wearing high shoes with red heels. He waited until she was close. The shrill ring of the bell shattered the silence, and he lunged for the door.

"Why, Cera, how nice you look," he murmured.

"You really like it?" she asked.

"Marvelous!" he replied quickly, wondering whether she noted the change in his voice.

Farmers Warned Against Bin-Burnt Grain

WINNIPEG—Western farmers with millions of bushels of grain piled in open bins after last year's bumper crop have been warned by the board of grain commissioners to watch for "bin-burnt" kernels.

The kernels result from rain or rotting corns soaking into a bin. A pocket of wet grain starts to heat, and the heat spreads to the rest of the grain. The kernels are then in moisture content, the heating may spread and damage all the grain in the bin.

Chief grain inspector A. F. Doolittle said the warning followed a marked increase in calls containing heated kernels. The trouble was not reported in any particular area and there was no estimate of the amount of grain affected. The chief inspector L. J. Anderson of the grain research laboratory said the affected grain produced a small dark spot of heat.

At March 31, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics reported, farm storage was 400,000 bushels of grain including the estimated 680,000 bushels of wheat.

Much was heaped in central piles for open winter storage. Other grain was stored in bins of full and empty sawdust lined with waterproof paper.

At March 31, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics estimated 239,000 bushels of grain were still in farms. Farmers who have grain piled in open should watch for heated and burnt kernels at the bottom of the pile, the board said.

"Some kernels around the bottom edge of the pile are also likely to be damaged by rotting. When piles are protected by sawdust and waterproof paper, the damage is less likely to be great."

It was reported that a total of 11 bushels will take place between the first of July and the first of September. Stand up, boys, and count. The Dominion Bureau, Sask.

"What have you done to it?" she demanded. "It looks different."

Body Of Mammoth Discovered

EDMONTON—A former gold miner told of finding in Alberta a mammoth body just as it was 50,000 years ago with fish and what looked like a mammoth.

Frank Kelly, now a gas station attendant at Fort McMurray, in an interview he was on an open mining area which uncovered the body along with those of a mammoth and a tiny horse in the Chalk River country near Fairbanks.

The animal appeared just as it was in real life, said Kelly who is in Edmonton on a visit.

He brought back a 11-pound tooth from the mammoth, somewhat similar in appearance but twice the size of a present-day elephant. The tooth was also in place with a several-inch growth on the side.

Astronomer's population was estimated at 3,233,000 at the end of 1932, an increase of 3,000,000 in 30 years.
